A UNION OF CANADIAN JEWISH CONGREGATIONS

Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

We urge the formation of a Union of Canadian Jewish Congregations. We want such an organization not because we believe that there is a Canadian Judaism distinct from American or German Judaism. Judaism is a universal faith which knows no national modifications. We want a Union of Canadian Jewish Congregations which could cope with the religious problems and needs of Canadian Jews. At the present time the Jewish religious field in Canada is chaotic. No organization is available for a study of religious problems and religious needs. In the larger centers, there are thousands unaffiliated with the synagogue and others not reached by Judaism. In the smaller communities, Jews are left to shift for themselves. The only Jewish groups that make contacts with the scattered Jewish communities are those who seek to collect funds from them. From Winnipeg to Vancouver there is not an English speaking rabbi or even a Yiddish speaking rabbi. In Saskatchewan there are about five thousand Jewish farmers, with whom no one makes religious contacts. The prairies of Alberta and Saskatchewan, with hundreds of Jewish families have no rabbis or spiritual leaders at all. It is true that Talmud Torahs function in some of these communities and function well, but yet some organizing power is needed. Throughout the country there are in isolated places individual Jews. They must be reached, and their children must be taken care of spiritually. A national organization is imperative. We appeal to the rabbis and lay leaders to join us in effecting such an organization. We are not concerned about orthodoxy or liberalism. We are interested primarily in a non-hyphenated Judaism. Such a synagogue organization could first survey the religious field in Canada and then devise ways and means of meeting its problems. Several centers, a correspondence school for religious education, regular visits to isolated communities by Jewish lecturers, etc., constitute some of the work that might be achieved. We shall look forward to hearing reactions from our readers to our suggestion.

THE PEOPLE OF THE BOOK

We walked into a little bookstore in the heart of Toronto's Jewish section. It is a store frequented not by the Jewish social élite, but by the Jewish proletariat. We glanced at the shelves. We missed there the glaring books on sex often so prominently displayed in other book stores, and frequently so hungrily devoured. We saw only the best of current works—the best novels, the best non-fictions. We were reminded of the little bookstores we love to visit in New York's East side. There is an atmosphere of genuine culture in them. Jewish workers may be operators on machines all day, but at night and in their leisure, they free themselves from the machine and become hungry seekers after truth and beauty. Visit any book store that caters to Jewish workers, and from the books on display, you will find that the degree of culture is very high. The Jewish workers have refused to be mechanized. They are still of the people of the book, and the arts still claim their homage. For what is true of literature is true of music and painting. The art galleries in Toronto and the concerts are patronized more by humble Jews than by other people. In fact, there is a better awareness of ultimate values in many a Jewish worker's home, than there is in the homes of the successful materialistic bourgeoisie.

A JOINT CAMPAIGN FOR A BOYS' CAMP AND A BOYS' CLUB GYMNASIUM

While B'nai B'rith orators are delaying the collection of funds for a much needed boys' camp for the Jewish community, the idea has occurred to us that just as imperatively needed as a boys' camp for the summer, is an adequate headquarters for the boys' clubs with gymnasium and other recreational facilities. The present quarters for the boys' clubs are totally inadequate. The property bought by Federation could be sold at some profit, and the proceeds plus about Thirty-five Thousand Dollars would make possible the new building. Inasmuch as a campaign for a boys' camp must be held, and inasmuch as one for the boys' club building is equally imperative, we recommend that a joint campaign for Fifty Thousand Dollars be launched—Fifteen Thousand Dollars for the camp and Thirty-five Thousand Dollars for the gymnasium. With one organized effort, both causes which really are one could be served. The community would have the advantage of having but one campaign and thus eliminate much effort, more frenzy and more expense. We hope that this suggestion of a joint campaign will be carefully considered, and that in a few weeks' time, the community will do something constructive for the boys under our care.

PUTTING TEETH IN THE KELLOG TREATY

When the Kellog Treaties were being signed, cynics pointed out that these treaties were but hollow and empty gestures, and that they instituted merely more scraps of paper no more effective in stopping wars than had been other treaties. This attitude appeared to be justified especially, when the ruler of the nation which had championed the Kellog Treaties, on Armistice Day pleaded for a bigger navy. Thus we saw the paradox of a nation on the one hand solemnly swearing to outlaw wars, and on the other hand, mocking that promise by an intensive program of militarism. Senator Capper of Kansas has presented a resolution to the senate which promises to make the Kellog Treaties more effective. His resolution would make it illegal for any American concern to transact any business whatsoever, with any nation which violates the Kellog Treaty. The government would enforce a boycott against any outlaw nation.

This resolution will not be considered until the next session of congress. We hope that it will carry. We believe in the outlawry of war treaties. We feel that the nation which violates them should feed that such a violation makes her an outcast, and that no respectable nation will trade with her as long as she persists in her bellicose policies. Nations today are dependent on each other for food and raw materials. If a nation at war would know that she would receive nothing she needs from any neutral nations, wars would be fewer. The Capper resolutions aims to put teeth in the Outlawry of War Resolutions. It deserves the support of all lovers of peace.

Annual Building Exhibition

K. D. Church, new president of the Montreal Builders' Exchange; L. W. Halliday, head of the Retail Lumber Dealers' Association; John S. Archibald, leading Montreal architect, and other outstanding men in the building and allied industries had a part Wednesday evening in the official opening of the annual Building Exhibition in the Windsor Hotel. Musical entertainment will be provided at intervals during the period that the exhibition is open, every afternoon and evening, until Saturday night.

The exhibition occupies the whole of the Rose Room and the Windsor Hall, the foyer and Peacock Alley, with every available corner turned to service to meet the demand from exhibitors on every hand. The home-owner will see there hints and suggestions of value regarding alterations or improvements he may contemplate making. He may even see things that suggest improvements of which he had not already thought. The home-builder will see hints and suggestions as to how he may plan some feature of his home better than he had yet thought of; the tenant may see and learn enough of building to be tempted to set up a house of his own; or at least he will see what the 1929 interpretation of modern conveniences is — information which may prove of great value when he starts hunting for a new flat or apartment. It is difficult to conceive of anyone who would fail to derive some real benefit from a visit to the Building Exhibition.

This show promises to be the biggest and best exhibition of building materials the Dominion of Canada has yet seen. A year ago a similar show was held in the Windsor Hotel, and was declared a great success by all concerned, but the indications this year are that the success of the exhibition will be even greater.

Everything imaginable in the way of up-to-date developments in building science will be illustrated by exhibits. Various kinds of wood for various purposes, both in frame construction, interior construction and inside trim; wall-boards and insulation materials; heating apparatus; decorative materials for inside finish; architectural exhibits; models of big buildings at present under construction, notably the Dominion Square and the Bell Telephone buildings, among others; diagrams and plans of other buildings; models of interiors; examples of new methods of doing various building operations, etc. All these things and myriad others will be shown, covering so wide a scope that no one who either owns a home, builds homes or lives in one can fail to find something interesting there.

While the exhibition is obviously of interest to the building contractor, the architect, designer and owner of big properties, it has a very special interest for the home-owner and the home-builder. The man who cannot afford to hire highly qualified experts to advise him on a variety of different subjects connected with the building of his home, the owner of a home, or the tenant will find information of value.

Felix Warburg Speaks Out!

That was a stirring rebuke which Felix Warburg delivered against our "Jewish Four Hundred", last Thursday! Warburg in his speech deplored that our Jewish rich waste their energies in the insignificant things of life. He went on to say: "Is there nothing more in the world than auto-riding, golf clubs, and bad stories? Is there nothing more important than buying a new mashie or a new hat?" Life can be so rich. If I have done anything, I have not done it by sitting at home playing bridge. People to me are the most beautiful flowers in the world." Warburg went on to criticize those Jews who fail to support the great undertakings in Palestine and world Jewry, and who have come to attach importances to the small things in life. I like the frankness of Warburg. Had he been addressing a Canadian Jewish audience, he might have added: "Is there nothing more important than attending hockey games three weekly? Is there nothing more important than to remember the names of the hockey 'stars'?"

The Passing of Meshulachim

The past few weeks witnessed a flood of meshulachim in Montreal. These emissaries of various Jewish institutions take themselves a bit too seriously. It is a psychological study to see them lay claim as to the importance of the particular institution each represents. And leave it to the Montreal ambassadors! They certainly know when to put forth their claims upon a community. Somehow they usually appear before the meeting of a United Palestine Appeal and make their demands—and, of course, a settlement must be made. The meshulachim, the meshulachim—in spite of their calls I have a warm spot for them. They remind us of the past of Jewish life. For after all, a Yeshiba in Poland is in all likelihood the concern of the Jew in Montreal.

A Society for the Advancement of Judaism

I note that my esteemed colleague, the spiritual leader of Shaare-Zion brought into existence in Montreal, a branch of The Society for the Advancement of Judaism: the leader of which is Dr. Mordecai Kaplan. I have great respect for Mordecai Kaplan. To my mind the Jewish Theological Seminary of America can well boast of Kaplan. He is a constructive thinking Jewish leader. He is a daring and truth seeking individual. Kaplan conceives of Judaism as a civilization. He wants Jewish religious traditions to be interpreted in terms of understandable experience and to be made relevant to our present day needs. The local branch has a place in the community. The thinking Jewish individual can find much in the program and aims of Prof. Kaplan's organization.

Escaping Judaism

Once a Jew always a Jew! It is impossible to resign from the Jewish race. Time and again one hears of those who tried to "escape" Judaism but failed in the end. One need only mention Ballin of the Hamburg American Line who "germanized" and Germanized himself—but the day of reckoning came. He failed to escape Judaism. The result was suicide. The tragedy, of course, was the fact that the German Kaiser had to remind Ballin of the fact that he was a Jew. But there is a classic example of escaping Judaism which I find in "Jews Are Like That". "When Samuel Gompers died and it was learned that despite the rather low visibility of his Judaism during his lifetime he had desired Jewish burial, the officials of the American Federation of Labor suggested as one of the two rabbis to be invited to take part in the funeral ceremonies, the name of Felix Adler. Yet it had been half a century that Felix Adler, refusing to enter the Jewish ministry and renouncing the religion of Israel had read himself out of the life of the Jewish people."

It Came to Pass That—

—By Dr. Cecil Roth, of London, England, fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

MARCH 8TH.

Birth of Salomon Kohn, 1825. The ancient Judenviertel of Prague, in which city he was born, with its historic synagogues and picturesque streets, appealed to the romantic element in his nature. He became accordingly one of the pioneer Jewish novelists and poets. His reputation was made by his Gabriel, which secured its vogue strangely enough in an English translation: but his chief work was Ein Deutscher Kaufmann, which appeared in 1894. His literary activity continued well into the present century.

MARCH 9TH.

Protest of the Sultan against the Papal treatment of the Jews, 1556. When Paul IV. set about his reactionary policy of exterminating the Marranos who had returned to Judaism in his dominions, their cause was espoused at Constantinople by Dona Gracia Mendes and her nephew, Joseph Nasi, Duke of Naxos. Under their influence, the Sultan, Suleiman the Magnificent, addressed the Pope a haughty letter protesting against this cruelty and insisting upon the release of any of the victims who were his subjects. His action was successful, and the Turkish Jews were released. Ultimately, an attempt was made to avenge their companions (many of whom were burned) by organizing an economic boycott of the Papal ports. All of this sounds strikingly modern, excepting that in this case it is the enlightened East which is trying to check the consequences of the barbarism of the West.

MARCH 10TH.

Execution of Vincent (Winz) Fettmilch, 1616. A fanatical Calvinist demagogue, ex-soldier and master-baker, he had confessedly set himself up as the new Haman of the Jews of his native city of Frankfort. Repeated petitions for their expulsion from the city having been rejected by the Town Council, he at length took the law into his own hands, and invaded the Jewish quarter on August 22, 1614, at the head of a large and unruly mob. The Jews removed their children and the aged to the cemetery, which was situated at the far end of the street, and took up arms to resist the incursion. Several persons on either side were injured, two Jews and one Christian being killed. But the defence could not be protracted. The Jews were overpowered and left to defend their families. Meanwhile, their houses were sacked, vast losses ensuing. Fettmilch then issued orders for them to leave the town immediately. The Fishers' Gate was opened for them, and they embarked in small boats for little places on the banks of the river. For some time, the demagogue was in control of the town: but at last the Emperor's patience became exhausted, and he issued instructions for his arrest. His popularity with the rabble enabled him to elude his fate for some time: but at last he was arrested and convicted. On March 10, 1616, he was hanged like his Biblical prototype on whom he had modelled himself: his body was quartered, and his house razed to the ground. The Jews, permitted to return under the neue statigkeit of January 3rd, 1617, celebrated their deliverance by a special feast which they observed year by year on Adar 20 under the name of Purim Winz.

MARCH 11TH.

Emancipation in Prussia, 1812. The Liberal minister, Hardenburg, had for some time been endeavouring to obtain the removal of the civil disabilities of the Jews. Frederick William III., true to his native spirit of obscurantism, would not consent to any measure of the sort even at such a dark hour in the fortunes of his country. At last, however (moved according to report by the emotion shown by the Berlin community at the death of Queen Louise) he gave his consent. The edict of March 11th, 1812, gave the Jews civic liberty and admitted them to the Army and to professorships in the Universities: but they were still excluded from public appointments. In the War of Liberation, the Jews showed themselves worthy of their new citizenship: and the statute of 1812 remained valid for the original Prussian provinces (with the exception of the clause admitting them to professorships) even during the period of strong reaction which followed the battle of Waterloo.

MARCH 12TH.

Wiener Geserah, 1421. The Russite Wars had revived Crusading animosities in central Europe. When therefore, shortly before Passover, three children fell through the ice near Vienna and were drowned, it was natural to accuse the Jews of having committed a ritual murder. To this was added a trumped-up charge that the wife of the sacristan of Ems had been bribed to purloin from the church the consecrated elements, which were to be distributed amongst the Austrian communities for maltreatment. In consequence of this ridiculous accusation, the Archduke Albert had all of the Jews of his realm arrested on a single day. The poorer were expelled from the country, but all the rest were thrown into gaol. A few succumbed to the temptations of abjuration: more committed suicide: but the vast body remained steadfast. These were all burned alive on one day, March 12th., 1421, more than one hundred persons belonging to the community of Vienna perishing in one field near Eidelburg. This massacre was followed by an edict excluding the Jews from the whole of the country. This, the Wiener Geserah (as it was called), was the most tragic event in the history of the Jews in Austria, and it marks the end of the cultural hegemony of Germany for many centuries to come.

MARCH 13TH.

Death of Mordecai Meisel, 1601. He represents a fine type of the Jewish philanthropist, and many perhaps be called the Rothchild of the sixteenth century. Born at Prague in 1528, he acquired in some way which is not yet known enormous wealth. This he expended lavishly, without regard for distinctions of creed. With his first wife, he built the Jewish Communal Hall at Prague: with his second, the famous Meisel Synagogue, which still bears his name. He enlarged the cemetery at his own expense, paved the streets of the Judenstadt, ransomed slaves, dowered brides, clothed the needy (in uniform!), lent to impoverished merchants without interest, helped widows and orphans, and made generous contributions to foreign communities when they were in want. At the same time he contributed generously to Christian charities, and even went so far as to assist in the completion of the Church of the Redeemer. Naturally, his services were sought out by the Emperor, to whom he repeatedly lent large sums of money. In recognition of this, immediately the breath was out of his body, the whole of his estate was confiscated by the Treasury, his

The bridesmaids were Miss Ethel Valinsky, sister of the bride, in old gold tulle; Beatrice Kaminsky in sea foam green satin, and Zelda Webber in an Italian period gown of silver, bouffant style with hand-painted baskets of flowers. "The Rise of David Levinsky"

THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW

announces that by special arrangement with Harper's it will soon begin to run "The Rise of David Levinsky" as a serial story. "The Rise of David Levinsky" was written by Abraham Cahan, editor of the JEWISH DAILY FORWARD of New York. It ranks as one of the great contributions made by Jewish writers to American literature. So real that it might be the genuine autobiography of a new American, this life-story of a Russian Jewish immigrant, is an impressive portrait of a human soul. It shows David Levinsky's conflict between materialism and idealism, his intellectual development, and his romantic experiences, each a study in the psychology of passion.

You will see startling pictures and hear gripping experiences in "The Rise of David Levinsky." You will never forget David's life in the Russian ghetto or how he begins his existence in New York as a hungry, lonely peddler. While making his way through college as a "seasonal" worker in a cloak and suit shop an affront by his employer changes the course of David's life and against his own wishes he becomes the millionaire owner of a huge cloak factory. Every Jew should be fascinated by this powerful story of Abraham Cahan's. It is profound, colorful, a realistic novel of literary importance.

Watch for the first installment of this book in THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW. It will appear soon. Read it aloud. If you are not a regular subscriber to the REVIEW make sure to become one now. You will not want to miss a single installment of this appealing story.

testamentary dispositions being entirely neglected and one of his heirs being put to torture in order to encourage him to reveal the hiding-place of what had been concealed.

MARCH 14TH.

He is detained in charge at Przemysl, 1630. A Christian woman accused certain Jews of having incited her to steal the consecrated elements, which they were foolishly supposed to desire to martyr. Her declaration led to a riot, in consequence of which a certain Moses the Braider was imprisoned. After cruel torture, he was condemned to the stake by a court which had no real competence in such matters, without the privilege of appeal. With his last breath, he continued to proclaim his innocence, dying with the cry of Shema Israel on his lips. This event is still commemorated in one of the older synagogues of the city on the Hebrew anniversary (Adar 30th., 1630) by fasting and the recitation of a special elegy.

POLITICS IN PALESTINE AND TRANSJORDANIA

With the recent arrival of the High Commissioner to Palestine, various parties have been aroused to renew their political demands and to organize their forces for political propaganda. Sir Hugh Chancellor is apparently regarded as a person of broad sympathies and the memoranda of the various groups come flowing in to him with all kinds of suggestions for the change of the political status of the country. While on a visit to the Rose Capitalian of Amman the Jewish Arab nationalist leaders submitted a memorandum to him demanding the repeal of the British-Transjordanian agreement, immediate establishment of a democratically elected Parliament, the freedom of the press and of Assembly, the reduction of taxation, and the abandonment of the policy of interference in Transjordanian affairs by the local British Resident. The elections to the Transjordanian Legislative Council have been opposed by the Nationalists pending the reply that will be given to their memorandum.

Vladimir Jabotinsky who has taken up the residence in Palestine, in spite of the obstacles placed in his way by the British authorities, with whom he has been a persona non grata for some time, has come out boldly in favor of the Weizmann idea of having Palestine established as a British dominion, rather than as a mandated territory under Great Britain. His demands include the appointment of a Jewish High Commissioner, the unrestricted immigration by Jews of the whole of Palestine, as well as Transjordania, and the free entry into the country of all Jews who wish to settle there. This platform was favorably acted upon by the Revisionists during their recent conference in Vienna, although no definite resolution was adopted. In a recent leading article in the Palestine Weekly, Jabotinsky has set forth his present views. He opposes the idea of Palestine becoming a British dominion, but aside the proviso that the Sinai Peninsula, as far as the Suez Canal, become annexed to Palestine. This territory although now nominally under Egyptian control, was offered to Dr. Theodor Herzl by the Egyptian Government several years ago for Jewish colonization and there is but little doubt that the Government would be willing to give up this area and which would be a great boon to the Jews of Palestine. While Great Britain will probably support with favor the project of having Palestine a British dominion [illegible] Jabotinsky would [illegible] the Arab population constituting the vast majority of the population.

Among letters received by the REVIEW in the past few weeks there are three of interest representing types which can not be published in this paper for varying reasons. One deals with a recent editorial by A. B. Bennett on the right of free speech as affected by police action following a Communist meeting in Toronto. The writer takes the stand that Communists who are Jews owe it to their fellow-Jews to be orderly and avoid trouble at all cost, even that of harm to their cause. The letter can not be published because it contains too much material which a Jew may not provide publicly as food for Anti-Semitism, the world being what it is.

A second letter takes up the subject "What is the condition of Jewish communal life in Montreal and what does it offer to the intelligent young Jew?" The writer concludes that "The fact remains that neither the narrow Orthodoxy of the North End nor the fashionable Conservatism and Reform of the West End offers any attraction to the intelligent young. The present phase of Jewish thinking is philosophical anarchism. The drift is way from religion of any kind." On the whole this letter is ably and thoughtfully written, the kind the REVIEW can always make room for. But it was impossible to verify the writer's signature, apparently a fictitious name having been given. It should have been accompanied with the sender's real name for purposes of identification.

The third letter is addressed to one of the REVIEW contributing editors but was sent to the editor with the explanation: "I thought it best to mail it to you instead." This letter is full of bitter criticism of a certain Jewish public figure, what he should be, what he isn't. It is signed rather tritely, "Observer." Now here is an A-1 exhibit of what makes an editor clap on hat and coat and walk a mile to get off steam. In order to gratify his personal spite and relieve his spleen the letter-writer hopes to see his denunciation in print. So long as he himself can crawl from under without taking any responsibility for the truth of his statements. Why should a paper take sides in a grudge fight, giving unwelcome publicity to the person attacked while enabling the aggressor to maintain guerilla warfare from the shelter of his typewriter? Even were the sender fully identified and willing to see his letter over his real name the Review would not print a letter coming under the category of the one in question.

There is another kind of letter which grows more abundantly than any other species. It is from the strutting pen of young people who dare a paper to print it. The paper hasn't the nerve, the "guts" to do it, etc. etc. This is the letter you never see. Often its points are well-taken and its writers well worth listening to but they spoil their cause by the method of its presentation. Very occasionally when such a letter has been printed no one has regretted it more than the sender himself.

Altruism on the part of this noble-hearted journal saves many a communal leader from exploding in haste to repent at leisure. It is one of the duties of a newspaper for the Jewish home to save the communal leaders from making asses of themselves whenever this high privilege comes within the province of the paper. A communal leader sometimes [illegible] the REVIEW office in the spirit of the man who dashes up to the lawyer and says: "Make me a new will! Nothing to my wife!" The communal leader is sizzling over the latest folly of some other communal leader of another sector with which he disagrees. He wants to write a [illegible] and let the world know just what he thinks about the other man. Of course he doesn't want to sign his name. He has to in a case like this. We insist, if he must. Then the man goes home. And next morning. When morning comes he decides he has made a mistake. Yesterday he was mad. If he only didn't have to sign his name he would be all right but not this way. So the REVIEW saves him.

[illegible] correspondence on matters of Jewish interest must [illegible] up to a certain simple standard and [illegible] rules. They need not be grammatical even but they should be [illegible] and of a dignity that does justice to [illegible]

No one can say what the value of a boy, but everyone knows that he is worth all the care and attention you can bestow on him. That thousands of mothers believe this, is proven by the fact that they give their children the very finest milk that money can buy, i.e. City Dairy "Certified" Milk. This special milk comes from our own farms at New Lowell. It is bottled, sealed and certified right on the farm. Telephone KIngsdale 6151 for delivery.

Mr. Lastar outlined the achievements of Zionism.

For presentation during the week commencing Monday, the Victoria theatre has chosen Samuel Shipman's arresting drama, "Lawful Larceny". In this play Miss Tahaferro has one of the greatest opportunities of her career. Here she will depict the young wife who loses her husband to an adventress. The stand she takes, the noble courage with which she fights to win him back, her daring scheme, and her last cry "Is it lawful for one woman to steal another's husband" go to make up the elements of a stirring drama. Every woman will want to see this play because it is the story of a woman's courage, every man will want to see it because it raises pertinent questions in regard to the justice of our laws.

"Lawful Larceny" is really a triangle within a triangle. It has two absorbing love stories that interwine and complex the situation until the end of the play has been reached. It all turns out with a happy ending, but not until it has run the entir gamut of human emotions. The scene in the third act where the wife faces the law and the woman and demands to know why she should be punished for stealing jewels while the other woman, who has stolen everything dear to her, goes free, is one of the most dramatic situations we can imagine.

Beauty and Performance

BEAUTY finds a new expression in the Ford car. Perfect proportion serves to mould its low lines in pleasing harmony. Graceful, full crown fenders, acorn type headlights and full-nickeled radiator shell and appointments set off its dignified appearance.

Performance in the Ford car implies more than smooth speed, flexibility, getaway and instant response to the brakes. The word covers inbuilt quality, precision methods of manufacture, and inherent balance — all of which make for many thousands of miles of carefree motoring.

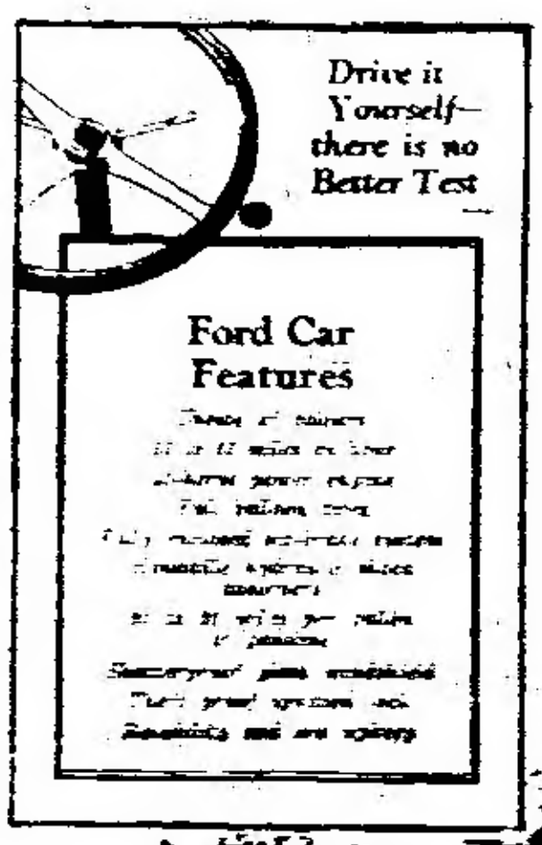
ECONOMY—Month after month, as you have the opportunity to test this Ford car of yours, the realization grows that it costs very little to operate. You find that you get over twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline in city driving; nearer thirty on the open road. It is sparing on oil. Tires last longer than you anticipated, because the car is light and braking smooth and even. Ford labour and parts are low and Ford service is available everywhere.

LONG LIFE—Your Ford car is not outstyled from year to year. You can drive it as long as you like and it will hold its own in any company. Rather than creating yearly models, the Ford Motor Company's policy is constantly to make improvements which can be incorporated with your car at low cost.

SAFETY—The fully enclosed six brake system grips the flying wheels with silent power. The windshield is of shatterproof glass. A steel body gives maximum protection. Even at high speeds the perfect balance of the Ford car and its unique and effective transverse springs hold it firmly on the road. These features contribute to both physical and mental comfort.

SIMPLICITY—Behind the whole plan of the Ford car is a basic principle that has been followed to the letter. This may be expressed in the words "Make it better — make it simpler".

TIME PAYMENT—If you prefer to buy out of income, you will find the authorized time payment plan offered by all Ford dealers most attractive.



Drive it Yourself— there is no Better Test
